To become an automotive mechanic, you must gain an Automotive Mechanic qualification.

If you get a Grade-2 national qualification, you will be able to work in Japan!

Become a member of the Nissan Dealer Group!
Nissan's network will help you to find employment anywhere in the country.

Work performed by automotive mechanics

Mainly diagnosis, inspection, servicing, disassembly, assembly, repairs and maintenance included. Most automotive mechanics work in repair shops and dealerships. Today, more and more non-Japanese automotive mechanics are being employed in Japan.

Nissan is driving the cars of tomorrow to achieve a safe and sustainable society with zero CO<sub>2</sub> emissions and zero traffic fatalities.

Nguyen Hoan Anh (Vietnam)

- The teachers always explained things in a way that was easy to understand, so I could study with no problem.
- I studied automobiles hard every day, and, thanks to that and to my teachers, I could get my Grade-2 Certified National Automobile Mechanic license and find a job.
- My main job right now is servicing and inspecting cars, and doing warranty and recall work. In the future, I want to gain further qualifications and work more directly with customers.
- You should continue studying Japanese while also taking your classes at the college right up until you find work.

Automotive mechanic
Member of the Service Department at a Nissan Dealership

Kim Tae Hyon (South Korea)

- There were lots of practical lessons, so for someone like me who loves Nissan cars, every day was really fun.
- I wanted to become proficient in Japanese, so I took every opportunity I could to talk with Japanese people.
- I was lucky enough to be given the job of performing inspections right after I entered the company. In the future, I want to gain various other qualifications and be more helpful to customers.
- If you want to work in Japan, you must make every effort to study Japanese. If you know about cars and can communicate in Japanese, everyone will know they can rely on you.
